THEY SAY

The flim flam leader's idle boasts will do him no good.

Rev. Geo. W. Lee will console himself in prayer.

The world is full of sorrow. McKinley will be renominated by acclamation.

Senator Hannah will retire from the chairmanship of the National Committee.

Because they are too cowardly to bite and making a loud noise often frightens the intruder.

It is not the man who loudest that will do the most harm.

Always watch the quiet man. If the Invincible Club goes to Philadelphia, it will be the first time in the history of the Club.

Don't be alarmed when you hear a noise.

The school board will be appointed soon.

The office should seek the man. Think a great deal but don't say anything.

Wait until you are asked a question before you answer.

Don't be alarmed at shot and shell, especially when they come from a windy politician.

The Blaine Invincibles must make a noise to be heard.

Their trip to Philadelphia will not save the places the boys want. Be a good man and then you will not have to apologize.

It is the man who does the deed that you must fear.

Cheatham is a politician and don't you forget it.

Piedger, of Georgia, has some manhood.

Do your duty and nothing more can be expected of you.

The flim flam leader will get his nose cooked for once and all times come, June 19.

It is the honest and true man who will do his duty.

How did you like the demonstration on the 23rd, ultimo?

On to Philadelphia is the cry now.

We should be honest as well as brave.

The people in the city are thinking over suffrage.

L. M. Saunders and Dr. Reyburn are not so anxious for suffrage now.

They suffered enough at the last election.

The republican party will win in the next election.

HE WAS CRIME'S VICTIM.

How a Millionaire Compelled a Bank Clerk to Steal.

A STORY WITH A MORAL.

One of the queerest crimes in history—Samuel C. Seely has served five years in the Penitentiary—One of the Principals Committed Suicide.

Out of Kings County Penitentiary in Brooklyn, N. Y., recently, after more than five years' servitude, stepped the victim of one of the queerest crimes in history—a man who stole $354,000 for the accommodation of another whom he scarcely knew, in whose house he had never been, whom he never cared for and whom eventually he hated. While columns have been written about the instrument by which this crime was committed, little has been said concerning the master mind which planned the looting of the Shoe and Leather Bank, and under the impetus of which Samuel C. Seely was no more than a wooden puppet.

Frederick Baker was a man of middle height and more than middle age, rotund, well dressed, with gray hair and a rosy face. A large landowner and a reputed millionaire, he yet was beginning to feel the pinch of embarrassment. He kept an open account with the Shoe and Leather Bank, and happened to deal with Seely because the latter had charge of the ledgers from A to K.

It all followed Baker's carelessness in writing out checks for $1,100 more than his account was good for, and Seely, accustomed to handling his orders for considerable sums, let them go through. When Seely found it out next day he was a badly frightened man. The thing that he should have done was to have reported the matter instantly to the president, but that might have entailed a reprimand, and Seely was too weak a man to face his chief's displeasure. Moreover, he understood by report that Baker was a man of wealth, and it did not occur to him that such a suave, white haired, well dressed old gentleman could be a rascal. So he sent a postal card requesting him to cover the deficiency. Baker got the card and tore it up.

Two days later Seely came panting into Baker's office and asked him to square up, and it took the shrewd real estate operator only about one minute to take his measure as a man whom it would be easy to work.

"That's right," he admitted, after the pass book had been balanced, and then he told a beautiful story of a real estate "deal," which would materialize in a few days, after which the account would be promptly squared.

Baker realized that Seely couldn't betray him, even if he wanted to. Then the game began in earnest. Baker had been making small deposits all the time, and checking the money out; but now the checks began to grow larger and the deposits smaller. There were little overdrafts every day or two, and every time he met them Seely realized that he was indeed in a "big hole," and that it was getting steadily bigger.

So it went on from week to week and month to month and year to year. The checks grew larger and more frequent, the overdrafts bigger and bigger, and Baker's promises smoother and more magnificent. And Seely still believed him. He never threatened Seely with State Prison. He was never brutally dictatorial, as he might have been. He was always regretful and hopeful, but every day his checks came in at the bank, and poor Seely had to see them paid or confess a shortage, which was up in the tens of thousands of dollars, and he couldn't do that.

Meanwhile Baker was living like a fighting cock, spending thousands of dollars annually. He had an expensive family, maintained a handsome town house and a beautiful country home and was able when he chose to take his family to Europe for a vacation.

During all this time the man who was providing thousands for Baker's speculations was piling up on $35 a week, trying to meet his insurance premiums and to make payments on his little house in Halsey street, Brooklyn. Every day after banking hours he went home clinging to a strap in a crowded trolley car, while the man whose tool he was could ride in a carriage.

But Seely did not go entirely without reward. After he had supplied Baker with a good many thousands it occurred to him such accommodation was worth something. So occasionally he went to Baker's office and timidly "touched him" for a few dollars. Sometimes it was $2 to go to a baseball match, or $5 for the theatre, and sometimes these "loans" of $2 or $5 or $100 never inconvenienced Baker, because he had only to put out checks for $5, $10 or $1,000, and Seely had to see him through.

All told Baker got about $35,000 a year from Seely. Seely got about $1,000 a year out of Baker, and he paid for it with an amount of misery and suffering which few men endured. And all the time Baker was making glib promises of restitution, which he never kept. Then at last the system of bookkeeping was changed, and the long dreaded exposure became sure.

A UNIQUE FISHING CRAFT.

Captain Jacobs Is Proud of the "Helen Miller Gould."

SAID TO SAIL IN A CALM

The Most Successful of American Fishermen—A Successful Trip—His Trouble With the Irish—An Interview With an Old Sea Dog.

There came into New York harbor the other day a woman's fishing craft. She was the Helen Miller Gould, of Gloucester, Mass.

"The name is an honor to the boat," said Captain Jacobs, as he made fast to the wharf, "and the boat is a credit to the name. How could it be otherwise?"

The curiosity was as to the style of craft which Capt. Jacobs, who is known as "the pioneer" fisherman, had designed. The thing that mackerel fishermen dread even more than a storm is a calm. Without wind to enable them to draw near when the fish are schooling they might as well be in port. Many a good catch had been prevented by the wind suddenly dying out while the fish were in sight. To secure immunity from loss due in this way to calms, Captain Jacobs placed an order for a small compact electro-gasoline engine of 35 horse-power. He arranged to set this in the stern under the cabin, and he built berths for his battery cells and tanks for his fuel in the same part of the vessel. The midship section he set apart for his store and salting quarters; and then found that he had ample space forward for his supplies, for his mess-room and for sleeping quarters for his men. The cost of building and equipping the vessel according to Captain Jacobs's plans was $23,000, which is a pretty stiff price for a mackerel schooner, and more than twice as much as many of them cost.

"We owe the success of this trip to the little engine," Captain Jacobs said, as he whisked off the hatch and pointed to the bins full of mackerel lying between the layers of ice in the hold. "There are 36,000 as fine fish as you ever saw, and we got them in two casts of that net. That's pretty near high line. But we'd never have come near them if we had been dependent solely upon our canvas, for there wasn't a whisper of a breeze blowing when we sighted 'em. That engine is the new fangle in mackerel fishing. It's a thing the other fellows will be running after soon."

The Helen Miller Gould got rid of her fish even faster than she caught them, for by 2 o'clock in the afternoon the 36,000 had been sold. Most of the fish went for ten cents each, but the choice brought twelve cents, and the catch put $4,000 in the pockets of the owners—not bad for two hauls of the net in a few days' fishing. On Wednesday morning at daybreak the Helen Miller Gould was scudding out through the Narrows again, bound down the coast in quest of other schools of fish. Miss Gould had expected to pay a visit to her namesake, but other engagements prevented. She probably will inspect the schooner on its return.

Last year was a bad year also for mackerel on this side, and in his efforts to supply the market Captain Jacobs came close to involving this country in another fisheries dispute with Great Britain. In defiance of sailor superstitions he crossed to the Irish coast where mackerel were plenty, in his thirteenth vessel, the Ethel B. Jacobs—named after one of his daughters. And he crossed the ocean in her in thirteen days; would have made it nine, he says, had he not been beset by four days.

The Irish fishermen heard of his coming and were up in arms against him; but he fished outside the three-mile limit in all sorts of weather, and had good luck. He ran into Liverpool to ship his catch to this side, and the British Government seized his vessel and kept her tied up for a month before he could secure her release. Then he instructed his lawyer to file a claim for damages against England—and went right back to the Irish coast after more mackerel. He had shipped cargoes of fish to the value of $7,000 to this market, when he was told by cable that his wife was seriously ill.

Command of the Ethel B. Jacobs was turned over to his friend and mate Captain William Cluett, and an English pilot was put aboard of her. Then Captain Jacobs came home. Captain Cluett made a successful haul and started to Liverpool with his fish, but the English pilot ran him on a reef on the Irish coast and sent the Ethel B. Jacobs to the bottom. So the thirteenth hoodoo finally got in its work. Captain Cluett is sailing with Captain Jacobs on the Helen Miller Gould, which is pretty good evidence that the loss of the Ethel B. Jacobs is laid to that English pilot.

ON A SHOESTRING.

How a Democratic Leader Was Elected to Congress.

Congressman William Sulzer, of New York City, since he ran for Assembly a number of years ago on a shoestring, and defeated the regular Tammany nominee, has been a great favorite with Richard Croker, and, in fact, is looked upon as his darling light-haired boy. Mr. Sulzer is now serving his third term in Congress, and is counted one of the leaders on the Democratic side of the House. He is also a member of the New York Press Club. And thereby hangs a tale.

A number of years ago two of his friends employed on a paper were discharged, and they appealed to Mr. Sulzer, then Speaker of the Assembly, to have him use his influence to get them work on another paper.

"All right," said Sulzer. "Start a daily paper of your own, and I'll help you."

And they did.

The paper from the jump carried a large line of advertising, including city work, and its circulation ran up to nearly 60,000 at a bound.

After the withdrawal of Mr. Sulzer, the paper was consolidated with the New York Mercury—now the Daily Telegraph.

Congressman Sulzer remains a great and good friend of the newspaper boys, and holds his membership in the Press Club. He is a forceful and eloquent speaker and an excellent presiding officer.

Repertee in Congress.

"My observation and experience in the House has been that it is extremely dangerous to interrupt a man who is making a speech," observed Representative Champ Clark, of Missouri, who gave the cold shivers to Representative Adams of Pennsylvania the other day, when the latter interposed some remark into his utterances on the Philippine question. "If he has good control of his mental apparatus, the chances are all in his favor."

"I once received a stunning blow myself, which exemplified my original statement. It was in the last Congress, when the House was trying to fix a time for debating the civil service law. Some gentleman had proposed that the time should be divided equally between the friends and opponents of the law. Colonel Peter Hepburn, of Iowa, told the House that he thought the time should be divided into three parts. One portion should be given to the friends of the present law. There were others who were in favor of a partial repeal only; they should be given a portion of the time. Then Colonel Hepburn said the other portion of the time should be given to the Democrats, who were for total repeal of the law."

"How do you know that?" I was rash enough to ask him.

"Because it is wrong, and the Democrats are always wrong," he retorted. Afterwards, added the Missourian, "I crossed over to the Republican side and congratulated Colonel Hepburn. I often refer to that incident when I lecture."—Washington Post.

That New England Conscience.

I have heard it said that small New England children have the New England conscience, but some things I have seen and heard incline me to think that they often have it. I was a writer in the Boston Transcript. A story that was told me the other day points that way. One day the mother of a ten-year old boy gave him two slices of buttered bread, telling him to give one of them to his little sister. He carried out the order. But the night, when he went to bed, he was evidently disturbed in his mind and remorseful about something, and his mother questioned him in a way to bring out the truth. "I—I wasn't sure," he said, "but I was sure to give one to my little sister. But mine was a good deal better piece." "No," he answered, "but mine was a good deal better piece."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Evidently Holding Hands.

"Is that young man in the park with Maud still?" asked her father, suddenly looking up from his paper.

"Very still," replied her mother.

HON. ALSTON G. DAYTON.

A SPLENDID RECORD.

In 1894 after the passage of the famous Wilson Tariff bill; that caused almost a financial panic throughout the country. The second West Virginia Congressional District had been held in the grasp of the Democrats for many years; Hon. W. L. Wilson the author of the tariff bill bearing his name, had represented the District for many years; many able and good Republicans had been pitted against him, but all outside of the Congressional Breastworks. All parties were lined up in that year and the Democratic party was to rise or fall upon the merits of their tariff bill; the eyes of the Nation were centered on District of the author of the bill that bore his name. Who of the Republicans would lead fight against the great Tariff reformer; who held the district years for his party. The Republicans after canvassing the names of many of their leaders, finally they went to Barbour County and found Alston G. Dayton, a Country Lawyer, and nominated him against Prof. Wilson. Democrats laughed at the idea of running such a man against Mr. Wilson, who had a national reputation as a statesman and who had led his party to many victories. Republicans of the District in considerable numbers thought the fight a foregone one, though they waned in line for Mr. Dayton liked trained soldiers, from the day of his nomination to the close of the polls in November Mr. Dayton was constantly on the go. Never in the history of the state was such a canvass prosecuted. The District was a perfect volcano of meetings and oratory. Young Dayton the Republican gladiator made hills ring with his eloquence. The fight was hot from start to finish and after the District was canvassed as it never was before, Mr. Dayton came under the wire several lengths ahead with thousands of votes to spare. How well he has served his people and the state, a glance at his record will tell, from the time he entered Congress five years ago to the present he has been busy in promoting the financial industrial interest of his state. He has kept pace with the growing development of the state, the Iron and Coal Industries that furnish the wealth and give employment to thousands of men and women. He helped to restore the duty on Iron and Coal that was struck down by the Wilson bill; he helped to place on the statute books a sound financial bill, that will enable a citizen from West Virginia in a foreign country to exchange his American money dollar for dollar. Mr. Dayton is a leading member of the Naval Affairs Committee, a committee that is intrusted with the duty of formulating plans for the increase and the building of the Navy. No man on that Committee worked harder than he or gave the Government longer hours of service for a small pay that a Congressman gets. He is thoroughly conversant with naval and legislative matters that has for their objects the increase of Naval warfare. When the Naval appropriation bill was brought in the House some three weeks ago; he led the fight on the Republican side with one of the best speeches that ever was made on Naval matters. He discussed the armor plate manufacture. All eyes were turned on him during the delivery of his speech and when he took his seat he was greeted with applause from floor and gallery. It is true that he has not succeeded in getting every one an office that wanted one nor will any body else be able to do that. He cannot change a law that keeps thousands of people in office that ought not to be kept in office and the man that hopes to come to Congress and change existing usages and laws, will find himself a party of his own. When men have performed their Congressional duties faithfully with eye the best interest of all the people he should be returned, this Mr. Dayton has done. He is a friend of the masses black and white and no one man from West Va., is too poor to have an audience with Mr. Dayton. You don't have to have on a plug hat and swallow tail coat to see him like Mr. Lincoln he comes from the common people. No colored man can afford to oppose Mr. Dayton unless they are looking for a soup house as we had 6 years ago.

The week just closed has demonstrated two very important facts. The first is that the masses of the colored people are on the alert and are embracing every opportunity to give their children the best possible education, consistent with their means. The next fact is that the children have responded phenomenally to conditions and have this year improved upon previous years. The significance of these facts cannot be fully realized without taking into account the many charges which have been recently brought against the colored race. The more prejudiced and lower white element at the South have been vigorous in the declaration that the young colored man who has had the advantages of the schools is far inferior to the "Uncle" or "Mammy" who were schooled under the hard task master of Slavery. Not only this, but the process of proselytization has forced its venomous way so far that a northern clergyman has even suggested the wisdom of turning the ex-slave over to his former master and subjecting the free colored American to a life of slavery. We somewhat suspect that the above clergyman is but the tool of the South, the hireling, the paid emissary of the Negro-hater who has contracted to perform so much nefarious labor for so many pounds or ounces of silver. Or this same defamer in the garb of heaven may be a bona-fide Southerner who has insinuated his way into the North only to flatter, deceive and destroy. More than likely the imprudent imposter belongs to the latter species. But the fact remains that at the commencements of the public schools, which have just closed, demonstrate that all of the talk about the inferiority of the Negro is both and nonsense and that the true motive on the part of the enemies of the race lies in the simple fact that the colored people are advancing on the lines which insure the best of citizenship while the Negro hater is sullen silent and insinuate and are still hugging the delusion of race superiority and vainly striving to impress decent people of the co-gency of the same falsehood. No event is more reassuring or prophetic than the result of the work of the graded and High Schools but recently represented in the recent graduating classes. Every phase of active, business, practical life was fully defended by our recent graduates and the perceptive stimulus given was particularly noteworthy. All of this demonstrated the utility of our common schools and will serve as an inspiration to all good citizens while it will serve to give the lie to the mean, spiteful and false representations constantly circulated to prejudice our friends against us.

CANE FOR MR. CHASE.

The friends of W. Calvin Chase have purchased a gold-headed cane for presentation to him prior to his departure for Canton, Ohio, as a member of the committee to notify President McKinley of his renomination. The cane is on exhibition in the window of M. Goldsmith & Son, Jewelers, 511 Pennsylvania avenue.

MCKINLEY AND ROOSEVELT.

For the first time in the history of republican politics in this country, the republican national convention was unanimous in its choice for president and vice-presidential candidates. Mr. McKinley is the strongest candidate that the republicans could have put in the field. Col. Roosevelt, the vice-presidential nominee, will no doubt strengthen the ticket. The ticket will be elected beyond all doubt. The newspaper reports that Senator Hanna was defeated or that he was forced to accept Col. Roosevelt is untrue. The false alarm that the convention was to nominate Col. Roosevelt was street-talk and not the talk among the delegates. There was only one mind among the delegates. President McKinley was the unanimous choice of the convention. When he was placed in nomination by Mr. Foraker, for fifteen minutes the convention was a scene of the wildest enthusiasm. Every state and territory by its representative carried the emblem of the state to the platform and surrounded Senator Hanna, which was an evidence of his well trained leadership. Mr. Hanna was the lion of the hour. He was the coolest man in the convention and the most sanguine. He knew what he was doing. Mr. Quay kept a great deal of noise but it was like vapor. Senator Hanna was on the look out all the time. Nothing escaped him. He knew what he was about. He made president McKinley's interest his interest. Senator Hanna made a brilliant opening speech. The great declaration that there is such a word as "fail" caused the convention to go wild with enthusiasm. He knew what he was talking about and so did the delegates understand what Mr. Hanna said.

OUR NEW SCHOOL BOARD.

The District Commissioners this afternoon announced the appointment of the following persons as members of the board of education, which board, pursuant to the provision of the District appropriation act, approved June 6, 1900, succeeds July 1, the board of trustees of public schools: Charles J. Bell, J. Holdsworth Gordon, Dr. Richard Kingsman, George H. Harries, Mrs. Henry Litchfield West, James F. Bundy and Mrs. J. R. Francis, the two last named being the colored members of the board.

Now that the school trustees have been appointed it is hoped that the ring gang, defamers and traducers are happy. The Bee and the people are perfectly satisfied and tender congratulations to Commissioner Macfarland. Of course the many candida are disappointed and no one is more pleased at their disappointment than The Bee. The latest declaration was made by Dr. Purvis, a few evenings ago. He declared that he would be appointed, but how mistaken he was. Among the disappointed are: Purvis, Dr. Brown, M. D., R. W. Thompson, John F. Cook, R. S. Smith, Dr. Wilder and two dozen others.

The Bee is interested in the colored appointments, Mrs. Francis and Mr. Bundy. Mrs. Francis and Mr. Bundy have good sense. The people want fair play and will look for it from the board.

General Harries would make a first class President because he is level headed. Commissioner Macfarland is to be congratulated.

The fight for the Trusteeship of public schools is waging hotly. Many candidates are in the field greater or less desirability and efficiency. The declaration of the Commissioner to the effect that no office holder need apply while it is correct from a political standpoint, is yet illtimed and illogical when we come to consider the actual time necessary to the proper and faithful performance of the duties of a trustee. But the edict has gone forth and as a consequence no office holder, can consistently expect recognition along those lines. One thing we can reasonably and confidently hope for is that the Commissioner will give us an efficient, if possible experienced male trustee. If there is a present member of the Board who has demonstrated the necessary ability and correctness of administration we contend that such person ought to be recognized and appointed, despite the clamor of self seeking politicians and misguided preachers. The question is not as to complexion or of what creed a candidate may be; but it is strictly whether the candidate can or will serve the people honestly and fairly in his relation as trustee to great and far reaching educational interests of our children. This consideration should be paramount to all others and deference to barren and senseless sentimentalities will be less than a form of effete prostitution. We want trustees who are honest, brave, experienced and whose work in whatever field has demonstrated the fact that they are men of good heart, broad intellect and earnestness.

OUR THANKS.

THE BEE tenders its thanks to the entire press of the country and especially to the press of this city for the fair manner in which it treated its editor in chief. The Star, Post and Times, of this city fully demonstrated their loyalty to one of the members of the quill and at the same time gave to the opposition sufficient space to make a defense. The false and malicious attacks, many of them personal, only showed that the American people believe in honesty and fair play.

The editor of THE BEE tenders to his contemporaries his profound gratitude.

Is a member of the Society Sons of the American Revolution and is now a member of the National Republican Committee. Was appointed a Commissioner for the District of Columbia by President Harrison in 1893. He is a man of national reputation and an active working Republican. No man is more popular among the people of the Capital of the nation than Col. Parker. He is an honorable and up right man and one in whom the people have the most implicit confidence. The M. M. Parker Republican Club named for him is composed of some of the best known republicans in this city. Men of high social and intellectual standing. This club will be largely represented in the inauguration of President McKinley and Col. Roosevelt. In Philadelphia June 19th, this club was the center of attraction. Mr. Aaron Bradshaw is the President and he is making preparation to have a large and handsome banner made with Col. Parker's portrait painted on it.

He was the unanimous choice of the republicans of the District for national Committeeman, representing the District of Columbia. No better man could have been selected.

West Virginia's coal output increased from 11,400,000 tons in 1895 to 18,750,000 tons last year, giving employment to nearly 11,000 more men, who worked every day in that year, instead of 195 days in 1895. The bank deposits in that State have doubled within the same period. Trade failures have decreased by two-thirds. The value of the sheep has increased by 50 per cent, while the price of wool has doubled. Tobacco is worth considerably more money now than under the last Democratic administration. The lumber mills and factories are running full time, and it is safe to predict that West Virginia will stay in the Republican column.

A TRIUMPHAL DEPARTURE.

From the Daily Post, June 19

The Post desires to tender to the Republicans of the District of Columbia its unreserved and unstinted felicitations upon the magnificent showing made by their chosen representatives last Monday. Despite the gloomy predictions of the weather department, the sky cleared sufficiently to enable the marching hosts to carry out the elaborate programme which had been arranged so carefully in every detail, and the affair was a success from start to finish. We are confident that no Republican viewed Monday's spectacle without the production of a swelling in the vicinity of his chest or throat, marked an advancement in the life and morals of the party that appealed to every patriotic impulse, and the pride of the individual members is wholly admissible.

The Hon. W. Calvin Chase was, of course, the central figure of the demonstration. Mr. Chase's colleague and fellow journalist, the Hon. Nympha Jones, had preceded him to the convention city, and the duty of receiving the plaudits of the public devolved exclusively upon the gifted editor of the Washington Bee. Escorted by the Myron M. Parker Club and the W. Calvin Chase Club, the intrepid leader of the District Republicans, seated in a carriage and preceded by a brass band which discoursed rag time music copiously, was admired along the line of march. The procession gathered in volume as it proceeded, and by the time it reached the railway station where the W. Calvin Chase special was waiting the streets were literally black with enthusiastic humanity. What better proof of public affection and confidence could be asked?

We are aware of the fact that designing persons have gone to Philadelphia to endeavor to undo the work of the representative Republicans of the District of Columbia. The committee on credentials has been informed that the Hon. W. Calvin Chase and the Hon. Nympha Jones secured their credentials by ways that are peculiar and Foggy Bottom-like. But we have unlimited confidence in the ability of the eminent Republicans of the District to take care of themselves, and feel sure that, upon their return, the band will have occasion to discard rag time and turn to that old and pleasant tune "See, the Conquering Hero Comes."

Again we offer our felicitations to the Republicans of the District of Columbia. They ought to be extremely happy.

OUR WOMEN.

"THE ANVIL"

Edited by Nannie Viola Hartgrove.

The woman's column under a new editor made its salutary last week with some noticeable typographical errors which will be overlooked when we are reminded that the Editor in Chief has been kept busy watching the political actors in the play at Philadelphia.

In this column we hope to discuss living issues in the political, social, educational, moral and religious worlds; for after all the press cannot successfully carry on reforms in these fields without our co-operation.

There are many issues demanding our attention at this time but none of them will effect the masses of our women more than the "servant girl problem." We believe in thorough training for the important duties of life and especially for the professions. If a man wants to be a doctor he studies medicine; if a man wants to be a dentist he studies dentistry; if a woman wants to be a dress maker she studies dress making. Men and women do not expect to get knowledge of these subjects by inspiration. Our girls who earn their livelihood at service must learn that cooking and household work is a science and they must prepare themselves by study if they wish to hold their places in the homes of this country. We believe in trained hands as well as trained heads and hearts.

It is trying indeed to the nerves when one goes to church to hear a good sermon, have his soul revived by song and anthem to sit two hours and listen to a D. D. beat wind and raise a great dust by constantly throwing in air gospel biscuits full of gravel and split verbs. Trying indeed. But not half so trying to a visitor as to some good consecrated Christian who has given his last dime for carpet for the pulpit and a fine Bible for the stand. As we sit there and watch the D. D. walking the pulpit like a hungry lion in a cage, we sigh. He thrusts his hands into his suspenders occasionally rears back and struts like a peacock on a fair day, then runs them into his pockets, toys with coin and keys, grabs up the Bible, shoulders it as did Sampson the gate of the Philistines; marches too and fro, tires of this, throws it to the stand, begins to spit and snort, drinks a gallon of water; as he warms up for the climax, perspiration, like drops of blood run down and a stifling odor fills the air around. When to his satisfaction the subject is exhausted he sits down and when he comes to himself he realizes that he has walked five miles, worn thin a new carpet, broken his suspenders, worn his pockets sleek, drank a gallon of water, washed two handkerchiefs in "sweatpiration," filled a spittoon with spittle, loosened the binding of the Bible, broken the springs in the chair and won not a soul for Christ. Trying isn't it?

It is strange that most colored women in writing to persons with whom they are not acquainted or in leaving an order clerks will not use the prefix Miss or Mrs. You have as much right to the prefix as your white sister who never forgets the distinguishing feminine gender—Miss or Mrs. Use it please.

There are young men contemplating marriage and the truth is this, many of them would rather marry a pretty girl with only brain enough for a servant than to marry a servant girl with brain enough for a queen. Remember pretty stupid women are flowers with out fragrance.

The women with modern improvements finds it very taxing these hot days to keep her house? (straightened hair and bleached face) in order.

THE AUGUSTA SITUATION.

From the Brunswick Herald.

The feeling between the two races in Augusta has been very much embittered by the unfortunate affair in the subsequent lynching of his alleged slayer. There seems to have been no reason for doubt as to whether young Wilson actually did the killing. But he was hanged and ridiculed with bullets nevertheless, in the dead night of day, after a whole night of unspeakable torture and mutilation. Instead of endeavoring to allay the excited feeling which these incidents awakened, the white news papers, through editorials and contributed articles, have been adding fuel to the fire of race hatred. As a result a mob several hundred strong marched on Saturday last to the home of Rev. W. J. White, the venerable editor of the Georgia Baptist, for the purpose of disciplining him after the approval of a paragraph of about a dozen lines taken from the Washington Bee, of the fact that Rev. White, having been warned in time, had fled to the police barracks, doubtless alone, saved him from violence and possible death. The mob, balked of its prey, dispersed, but returned again on Saturday night, but were deterred by a strong force of policemen which had in the meantime been sent to protect his family and his property.

The last session of Congress passed 132 public acts, which had been approved by the President, up to and including the month of May. Many of these were of general public interest and were carefully considered by both Houses.

An act to define and fix the standard of value to maintain the parity of all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, to refund the public debt, and for other purposes, was the first bill passed through the House of Representatives, and became a law on March 14th last.

This bill is the most important of all that became law during the session. It places the finances of the country firmly on the gold standard. No public official can hereafter disparage any dollar issued by the United States until the Senate and House, with approval of the President, shall concur in amending this statute.

The bill also provides for the refunding of the national debt, amounting to $500,000,000, into 2 per cent bonds. Since the passage of the act this refunding process has been constantly going on, and now reaches about $60,000,000. As the old bonds bore interest at the rate of 3, 4 and 5 per cent, the national saving of interest on the bonds already refunded amounts to considerably more than $5,000,000. This saving will nearly equal the entire interest on the $500,000,000, borrowed to pay the expense of the Spanish war.

Should we succeed in refunding the entire indebtedness of eight hundred and fifty millions at the low rate of 2 per cent interest the national saving in interest would not only pay the interest on the Spanish war loan, but also the interest on the $250,000,000 of bonds issued by the last administration in time of peace.

Under the minor provisions of the bill there has been a great increase of national banks of limited capital in the smaller towns, particularly of the Western and Southern States. Bills providing for the government of the Hawaiian Islands and of Porto Rico, after long consideration, have finally become laws, while the bill for the government of Alaska has been passed.

The feature of the Porto Rican bill which occasioned most discussion was the most liberal toward that island any ever incorporated into law. It provides a slight tariff on the products of that country coming to the United States, and also on products shipped from the United States to Porto Rico, excepting necessities of life, all of which is turned over to the treasury of Porto Rico for a period of two years, or until local taxation can be provided by the new government. At the end of two years the States becomes absolutely free.

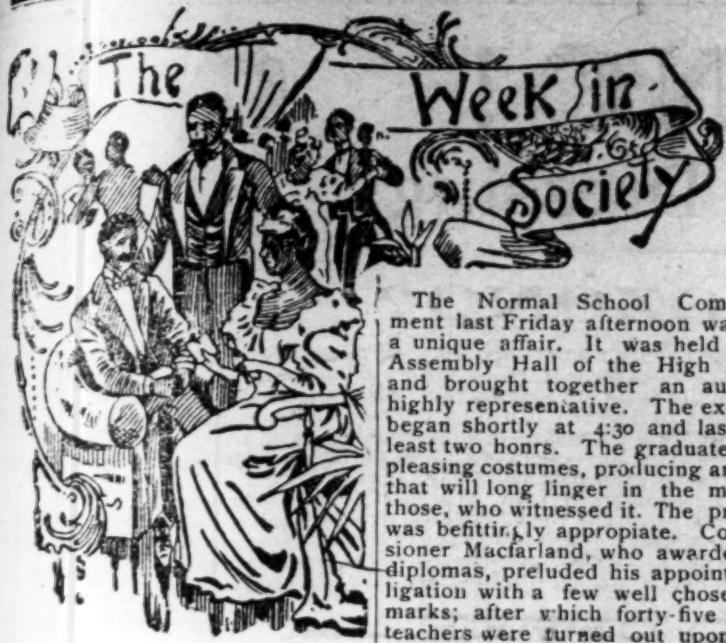

Not only this; Congress has appropriated all the revenue derived from goods imported into the United States from Porto Rico since the occupation, and amounting to more than $1,000,000, to the benefit of the people of that island. All tariff collected at Porto Rican ports is also to be used for that purpose. This was a boon to those people, justified by the circumstances, and unparalleled for generosity toward any people.

This Congress also passed the Homes bill, giving free homesteads on public lands to actual bona fide settlers. This was a measure popular by the platform of all parties.

An amendment to the pension law of 1890, known as the Grand Army bill, has also become a law.

A law of much importance passed during the session that allowing free transportation in bond of all goods shipped through the United States from a foreign country to another foreign country. This will be of great benefit to the shipping interests of the country.

An anti-trust law amendment to the Sherman law of 1890, as effective as far-reaching as the Constitution amendment, has also passed the House of Representatives. The appropriation bills have been carefully scrutinized, and although the aggregate is large, they are free from all questionable items. The grand order of the country and the continued order in the Philippine Islands are being accounted for the increase in annual bills. It was not deemed practicable to reduce the revenues during the session, but should the present year of surplus continue, the Commission Ways and Means, having been left to sit during the recess, will bring in a bill and press its passage at the beginning of the next session.

EARL'S ETCHINGS.

The Academy of Music was crowded to its utmost on Friday evening of last week, when Professor Hoffman and his choice company of artists appeared in their annual musicale. For more than two hours the vast assemblage enjoyed a pleasant melange, comprising choruses, solos and instrumental celebrities. The program contained three parts in which there were some weak features as well as strong. The chorus, as a whole, was admirably well and showed skillful execution in the line of vocal training. The voice of Madame Martina Irving though rich and fragrant, lacked volume and found little difficulty in filling the auditorium. The tenor of Mr. William Goodrich, however, was met with unremitting applause. The selection scored the crowning effect in part two of the program and in like manner became the star of the critic. The band concert was superb. It came just as the house had released all interest and had become exceedingly listless. "The Amer." "The Man Behind the Gun" and "The Patrol of the Boers," as rendered by Professor Hoffman's Band, gave new stimulus. Once more the fire of fresh attention was aglow and all lovers of music at the conclusion of the performance universally accorded the fact that they had been the recipients of a first class entertainment.

Miss Josephine Leary, of Edenton, N. C., is in the city the guest of Mrs. O. A. Williams, 338 Spruce Street, N. W.

Miss Alice Jackson of the Slater School has been sick.

Missouri wants President McKinley reelected. Frank B. Moore, editor of the Daily Herald, of St. Joseph, says: "Democracy has nothing to offer to the public," but he predicts that the dinner-pail brigade will turn out solid for McKinley in November.

Our national prosperity is becoming more and more dependent upon a steady and large increase in our exports. This suggests that our continued dependence upon foreign ships for 90 per cent of our foreign carrying is a great national danger.

AT GRASY'S.

One of the best equipped and up to date Dry goods and Notion store in the city will be found at Grasy's Combination store 1506 1508 8th street N. W. In this store will be found everything from a pin to a horse blanket. All kinds of Groceries fresh from the market, always on hand. July 1st will be a grand opening. The various things you find now in this store is simply an eye opener to what will be in his July opening. Families will do well to visit this store. Plenty of good things for those who are looking for a bargain.

The greatest problem now to be solved is the upbuilding of our shipping in the foreign trade.

Since the establishment of the tin industry in the United States, there has been saved to this country upwards of $100,000,000. We used to import Welsh tin plate, made by the Welsh trust, to the value $2,000,000 a year. The Welsh tin plate trust is not subject to our laws, and pays nothing in the way of taxation toward the United States Treasury. Still the Democratic party fought tooth and nail against taking away the trade from them and giving it to American factories.

AARON BRADSHAW.

Idaho fruit sold at the Chicago market in 1896 for just enough money to pay the freight. This year it has been sold at $1.00 per crate of twenty-five pounds, the freight being $1.00 per 100 pounds. Hay sold in Idaho at $2.50 per ton in 1896. This year it has sold at $5 per ton. Hogs sold there for 3 cents per pound in 1896. Within the last few months similar hogs have sold for 4 1/2 cents per pound.

Money in the United States is cheaper than anywhere else in the world. At the market price in April, the average earnings for our 4 per cent bonds of 1925 were 2 2/4 per cent; for the 4's of 1907 40 earnings were 1.867 per cent, for the 3's, 1.738 per cent; for the 5s, 1.452 per cent. German 3 1/2 per cents sold at 96 1/2 to 97, and German 3's at 86 to 86 1/2, so that their earnings to the buyer were more than the interest stated. The premium on British consols is about one per cent, and on the French rate one-per-cent their earnings vary little above the face interest.

A CLOSE SHAVE.

Thrilling Experience of Two Troopers in South Africa.

He was sitting with his back against a bowlder, with his rifle barrel resting on a stone, the stock on his knees. He was using the stock for a desk, and was writing laboriously in pencil on a crumpled sheet of paper.

"This is devilish hard work," he exclaimed, "but I must get it done today. I was always a poor scribe at a letter. How do you spell 'reconnaissance'?"

Trooper 943 gave him the idea of it. "That's all wrong," he said. "I'm sure there isn't a 'k' in it. But it is of little consequence. All my spelling is gone to the deuce. I never learned anything at school, and not much after I left."

Trooper 943 laughed. "Seems to me you know a lot," he said. "No blame! If you don't know as much you ought to be ashamed of yourself."

A bullet buzzed overhead. Trooper 943 sighted and fired.

"Got him?"

"I wouldn't like to be the bloke's wife and family."

"Tell me if you see anything else. I must get this finished."

He scribbled on for a while in silence, dropped his pencil, picked it up, and rose to stretch himself.

"Git down, stoopid!" said Trooper 943.

A second bullet buzzed and the other's right arm dropped to his side. "Slack through the shoulder," he said. He sat down again, looking a little pale.

"Now you're bin and spoilt your 'and-writing," said 943. "Told you so. Does it 'urt'?"

"No, not much. Here, just sign my name at the end of that letter, will you?"

Trooper 943 signed the name in a shambling, awkward hand. Then he began to grumble again.

"Just like you! The best in our little lot got a 'ole in him. Blimey, if you ain't a daisy!"

The other took the letter and crammed it into his pocket with his left hand.

"Shut up," he said. "I can shoot from the left. Hallo! Look out!"

The men were on their feet and in the saddle in a moment, all but Trooper 943, who fell to one of the twenty bullets that had spit among them.

The letter writer was down again in a flash and had him across his horse. Trooper 943 laughed again, though rather feebly. "Well, you are a daisy!" he said.

The men scattered and rode off in a sputter of bullets.

"Drop me," said Trooper 943. "I'll be all right. You'll only git copped."

"Shut up!"

They did get copped, but it was a ride to be remembered all the days of a man's life. Also, the letter was spoiled.

"You ought to 'ave the medal," said 943 some hours later. "You fair saved me."

"Did I?" said a voice from the next bed. "And you spoilt my letter, you ungrateful beggar. You might have chosen somewhere else to bleed."

"Fair saved me, you did," he said. "You ain't a gentleman, are you? Oh, no!"

RICHARD SYLVESTER.

Among the many Chief of Police in the country there is none any more popular than Major Richard Sylvester, the present Chief of the Police for the District of Columbia. The District police force has greatly improved under the direction of Major Sylvester. The cut of him above is an exact likeness of the Chief of Police for the Capital of the Nation. He is respected and honored throughout this Country as being one of the most efficient officers in the government. As a disciplinarian his equals cannot be found. The police department of the District of Columbia never was in a better condition.

CRONJE AT ST. HELENA.

He is at Longwood, Napoleon's Old Home.

Cronje, the lion of South Africa, has arrived at St. Helena and occupies the prison of Napoleon, once the master of the world.

The French are loud in their sympathy for the gallant Cronje, and they are furious, almost beyond expression, that the British should put the rough old Boer farmer on a level with the great Napoleon.

To an impartial outsider the situation has some amusing features, but it will not decrease the accumulation of anti-British sentiment that is stored up in various parts of the world.

Sending Cronje and his men to St. Helena puts escape entirely out of the question, as the Boers have not even a ship to send after him. The island is 1,200 miles from the nearest African shore, about 2,000 miles from the Transvaal and many thousand miles from anywhere else.

Longwood is a long, low, rambling building. It was originally a barn of the East India Company. It was then converted into a residence and is really a comfortable country house. It is situated, however, in one of the dampest, coldest and most inaccessible parts of the island. It was for the last named quality that it was chosen as a residence for Napoleon.

The Emperor, who had been used to the dry and cheerful climate of France and Southern Europe, complained bitterly of the dampness of Longwood. He demanded one thousand weight of firewood a month, whereupon Sir Hudson Lowe, the Governor, remarked that he only used three hundred weight himself, and refused any more. There were long and angry discussions between Sir Hudson and Napoleon's suite on the subject of firewood.

Longwood can be watched all the time from Plantation House, the residence of the Governor, and commanded by guns from the same place.

It is not likely that Cronje will make the same complaint about cold and hardship as Napoleon, because he has been used to the rough, hard life of a farmer. What worries him about St. Helena is that it makes escape impossible, of which he had a pretty good chance at Cape Town.

Cronje will receive the same treatment from the British soldiers as Napoleon did, in order to make the strange chain of historical repetition complete. Napoleon was not allowed to go anywhere about the island without having a red-coated soldier follow him or the members of his suite without a special pass from the Governor. The officer in charge of the guard was instructed by the Governor to drop in "as if by accident" whenever Napoleon was seen conversing with a stranger outdoors and hear everything said. This treatment really killed Napoleon, for he refused to take exercise when subject to such spying, and this brought on the illness from which he died.

THE YOUNGEST SHRINER.

Not Yet Twenty-two Years Old, but is on the High Road of Masonry.

The subject of this sketch, Mr. John S. Curtis of Ludlow, Penn., claims to be the youngest Shriner and Thirty-second Degree Mason in the United States. This is equivalent to saying that he is the youngest Shriner in the world, the prerequisites of membership in the countries of Europe being such that no applicant for the order can pass through the councils of Masonry which are in amity with and recognized by the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine in the brief space of time covered in conferring the degrees upon this applicant. Mr. Curtis is not yet 22 years of age. His application for Masonic membership was presented in May, 1899, when he became of age, and he was made a Thirty-second Degree Mason of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite at Pittsburg Consistory on Nov. 24 of the same year. On the 13th of December he was made a Noble of the Mystic Shrine at Zem Zem Temple, Erie, Penn. Zem Zem is the name of a famous Arabic well in Mecca. The Temple by this name has been organized nine years, and now has a membership of 598, claiming to have made the greatest gain of any Temple in the United States during the past five years. To the Imperial Council, which meets at Washington in May, Mr. Curtis has recently been named as a delegate.—Leslie's Weekly.

Napoleon Relic.

Among Napoleonic relics sold in London recently was a remnant of the flag made by the women of St. Helena which covered Napoleon's coffin when conveyed to the French warship Belle Poule for transportation to France. It has always been a favorite occupation of women who have any military connections to embroider these emblems and the flag now floating over Ladysmith was worked by Lady Roberts.

WHAT IS OZONO?

A preparation prepared solely and distinctly to improve the condition of the hair of the negro race. Not a worthless, offensive, obnoxious, greasy mass of injurious nostrums, but a delicately perfumed unguent, beautiful to look upon; made to adorn the lady, polish the gentleman, benefit youth, and gladden old age. OZONO straightens knotty, nappy, kinky, refractory hair. OZONO does this alone. No hot irons are necessary; no plastering down with grease. OZONO is a

Write to us at once, enclosing the small sum of ONE DOLLAR, and we will immediately forward to you four large boxes of OZONO. We will also send you one large bottle of ELECTRIC SKIN REFINER, which makes rough skin soft and brightens the blackest skin, making it several shades lighter. Now, there is much fraud practiced with face bleaches. Understand, we do not advertise this bleach to make one white. God alone can accomplish this, and it would be miraculous. Unpin your faith from frauds. We assert that our Refiner will soften rough skin and brighten black skin, but it can do no more. Take our advice; don't fool with any bleach that is advertised to make you white; it is more apt to poison you. We will also include one fancy jar of ELECTRICAL SKIN FOOD, which is a sure remedy for all Skin Eruptions, Pimples, Black Heads, Liver Spots, and all Skin Diseases. It will remove Wrinkles, Scars, Facial Blemishes, and will positively take out Small-Pox Pits. This is saying a great deal, but it is true. It makes the old look young and the young look younger. And, lastly, to prove our liberality we will add a one-pint package of A NIT-ODORE. This remedy removes all smells and odors arising from the human body. Its uses are too numerous to mention. MINISTER FELL BY POKER.

Streak of Luck Struck by a Young Crusader.

He was new in the city. When he first arrived strangers who saw him gambled that he was either a professional poker player or a minister. They could not tell which. He was not known personally to the men who frequented the gambling houses, and not much notice was taken of him when, in search of material for his sermon, he walked in alone one Monday night and glanced nervously around a room where a dozen men were playing different games. It seemed familiar to him for in his younger and wilder days he had gambled himself. The manager spied him and put him down at once as a slick professional who was there on a tiger-bucking expedition. He spoke to him, and learned his name.

"Dawson," he repeated. "Say, are you old Bill Dawson who used to run the faro bank in Memphis when I was there ten years ago? No? Well you are welcome, for you look like the dead game article and if you can beat me why then all well and good."

Mr. Dawson did not know how to explain. He had an inkling that he would be sent away if he said he was Dawson the minister, so he said nothing. He walked about aimlessly. The proprietor wanted to see him play. Dawson had not looked for anything like this and hesitated. The proprietor pushed him. There was a two dollar game, he said, just starting in the next room and they needed another player. The rattling of the chips and the calls of the gamblers, with the big money in sight, dazed Dawson and he allowed himself to be pushed into the poker room. Before he really knew what was up the proprietor had shoved him to a chair.

"Here's a good player, boys," he said, "and I want to see what he can do. He is Mr. Dawson and he is all right."

Of course the players were glad to see Mr. Dawson, but gladder to see the color of his money.

"You look like you could deal the cards in the pulpit," said a big man at the table, and Dawson colored. He laughed it away. The proprietor came up and Dawson, like a man in a dream, took out some money and bought a stack of chips.

"Seems as if the new player is dopy," commented a hitherto silent player, and Dawson braced himself. He saw that he was in for it and he had to play his way out. If he could lose, he thought, and then get away nobody would suspect that he was the parson, and all would be serene.

The game opened slow. There were no good hands running and the betting was quiet, so Dawson had more time to think. He was the last man to deal and he took the cards nervously, but the feel of the pasteboards seemed to give him more confidence in himself and he shuffled them like a veteran.

Everything was a jack pot and the first man to say opened for a couple of dollars. Two others stayed, a third raised and Dawson came in. There was more betting. When cards were called the opener stood pat, another man wanted two cards, another three and Dawson took one. He had drawn to aces and eights, the gambler's hand, and when he picked up the fifth card he saw the ace of spades.

The betting got lively. The opener, with a flush, considered it good and bet accordingly. Dawson, who by that time, felt the return of his old-time sporting blood, came on with a raise which paralyzed some of the more timid players and they dropped out. The dealer stuck and sent back another raise which was met and returned. Dawson was not going to cover and it was left to the opener to call.

"That's good," the opener said quietly, when Dawson announced that he had a full hand, and so the big pot, which was rich, was moved over to the parson's corner.

By this time the minister forgot his cloth and his errand to the place and he played with all his old-time enthusiasm. The cards ran well; it was just such a streak of luck as occasionally is found with a newcomer. The minister took in pot after pot. Once there was a good pot which had been sweetened time and again, and when one of the players said he would open it, Dawson found that he did not have a pair even to go in with. He had an ace, a jack, a seven, a trey and a deuce. He wanted to go in and try for the pot. He could well afford to lose a few. He started to draw to the ace, but reconsidered and held up the seven because he considered it lucky. Well, when he picked up his four cards, glanced at them without moving a feature and began raising the big bets, the other players put him down as a wonderful bluffer and came back at him hot and fast. When the big man finally called, the gambling parson quietly laid down four sevens and raked in the pot. He had beaten four fours. That was a sample of his luck.

At daylight Dawson cashed in $1,670 from the night's game. Just as he had shoved the money into his clothes a man came out from the room where the faro banking had been open, and recognized the minister.

"Why, Mr. Dawson," he said, "what are you doing here?" Dawson tried to explain. There was a wrangle. Finally Dawson explained the whole thing. To make a long story short Dawson packed his things and left the town at noon. Soon afterward I heard of him plunging high in Denver, and from that time on he turned in to be a professional gambler.

GOOD TRUST ORGANIZER

William H. Moore Pays $5,000,000 in Debts and Wins a Fortune of $10,000,000 in Five Years—Wall Street Wonders What He Will Do Next.

W. H. Moore is the necromancer of corporations. The Match Trust, the "Cracker" Trust, the Strawboard Trust, the Steel Trust, the Tin Plate Trust, and other trusts were the creations of his brain, and he has before him a country full of trust possibilities. Men in Wall street are now waiting to hear that another trust and a great one is under way.

As an organizer and financial director of great industrial combinations Judge Moore, who is one of the latest additions to New York's colony of Chicago millionaires, will probably always be better known than as a lawyer, but it was due to his knowledge of the corporation laws of many States that he was able to coalesce millions of dollars of the capital of great industries into great trade and manufacturing combinations. Added to his knowledge of corporation law he possesses the merchant sense to a marvellous degree. He juggles with millions of dollars as other men do with thousands. All his undertakings have reached into the millions, and his profits are numbered in like sums.

He has had the rare distinction of failing for $5,000,000. But that was nothing to this wizard of money, for before four years had passed he was out of debt and $10,000,000 ahead of the game. It takes a financier to do that. And through it all not a smirch has been put upon his good name.

One of the first industries to attract his attention was match manufacturing, in which, while the Diamond Match Company was the leader, there was great competition. In 1889 he succeeded in consolidating nearly all of the match interests under a single control, which was run on Standard Oil principles as nearly as possible and which opposed competition wherever it found it. It was through speculating in the stock of the Diamond Match Company that the Moore brothers lost $5,000,000 and went into debt for $5,000,000 more.

Besides the Diamond Match Company Judge Moore succeeded in organizing what was known as the Cracker Trust, or the New York Biscuit Company, the American Strawboard Company and the National Steel Company. The latter, his greatest achievement, was completed February 7, 1899. It embraces the National Steel Company, the American Tin Plate Company, the American Steel Hoop Company and the American Sheet Steel Company. This organization took in the leading steel mills of the country except the Carnegie interests, and represents capitalization of many millions of dollars. In 1898 the Moores had promoted the National Biscuit Company, which brought them a net profit of $2,000,000, and after the organization of the steel companies their fees for their services had amounted to $10,000,000. These corporations, with the Strawboard Trust, which was not as successful as the others, are known as the "Moore group," and represent an aggregate capitalization of $225,000,000.

In November, 1899, William H. Moore went to New York, and a month later bought the house then being built by W. E. D. Stokes at No. 4 East Fifty-fourth street, adjoining Fifth avenue, and the residence of Henry M. Flagler. This was evidence of his permanent residence in New York, and something startling was looked for in the interests that he represented. The Stokes house cost him $325,000. Until the house was finished, in March, he lived at the Holland House, and was one of its most conspicuous guests. His fifty-fourth street house is a five story American basement structure, on ground 36 feet front and 100 feet deep. It has a cut stone front, solid marble stairways, and is well lighted and ventilated, having windows on three sides.

Manners.

The Boston mamma was thoroughly out of patience. "Thoreau," she exclaimed, shaking her three-year-old son until his outside pair of glasses fell off, "how often must I tell you not to devour books with your elbows on the table!"

SHE HITS THE BULL'S EYE.

Great Shooting by a Young Indiana Woman.

COMES BY IT NATURALLY

Possibly It May be a Case of Heredity. But at all Events She is a Wonder—Her Passion for Target Shooting—Will Continue to Practice.

Some one has said there is a latent talent in every human being that, given an opportunity, is certain to push its way to the front. This would seem to be true of Miss Sonia Wright, of Lafayette, Ind., who is at the present moment attracting a great deal of notice to herself by reason of the very phenomenal shooting she is doing with a target rifle. It should be said for Miss Wright that, although her father was a British soldier, a member of the Royal Engineers, and she herself was born in the army, in Ireland, she was not at all acquainted with firearms, and when one day she visited the Lafayette Water Works with a party of ladies, the subject of guns coming up, she innocently asked the difference between a rifle and a shotgun.

John E. Long, the expert shot, who, though not laying claim to any championship honors, is yet regarded as one of the best all round fancy, trick and target shooters in the United States, is assistant engineer at the water works. Mr. Long was showing Miss Wright and her companions his supply of rifles, and during the explanation remarked that if he could find some bright-eyed, steady-nerved boy—one like his own son Clarence, recently deceased—he believed he would take him and train him in the use of firearms. Miss Wright jocularly asked him if she would not do as a pupil, and with no thought of her ever coming back Mr. Long responded affirmatively. Three or four days later Miss Wright presented herself, saying she came for her first lesson. Long procured the guns, and after showing Miss Wright how to handle the weapon, placed a cartridge in one of them and told her to shoot.

The very first shot Miss Wright fired struck the bull's-eye. Mr. Long, as well as his pupil, naturally supposed this was an accident, but it only went to show that the young lady pupil possessed an ability that she had never before known about. At the second lesson given her by Mr. Long the young woman put 20 out of a possible 22 shots in a space one inch long and one-half inch wide. This was at off-hand target practice, ten yards.

At the 128th shot fired by Miss Wright the bullet cut in twain a card that was held edgewise toward her. This card was cut in two at the first shot made at it, and the shot was made at the regular stage range of twenty-four feet. I saw a bit of cardboard with a bullet hole therein; it is a piece held between his thumb and finger by Mr. Long, whose confidence in the ability of the pupil was so great that he permitted her to shoot at the card as it was held in his hand.

At a public entertainment given by a church recently Miss Wright with a rifle cut cards edgewise, lighted a match with the bullet as it sped from the rifle, snuffed out a candle and knocked the ashes from the end of a cigar, not making a single miss. She says the candle shooting was the most difficult, because unless the bullet hit the wick the light would not be extinguished. She says she has developed a passion for target shooting, and intends, by practice, to become as expert as it is possible for a woman to be with a rifle.

Found the King.

An interesting story comes from Provo regarding the age of miracles. For those who are not superstitious it is a doubly entertaining. During a recent visit of President George Q. Cannon to the Southern town he was entertained at the home of L. Holbrook, manager of the Grand Central Mine. Mr. Holbrook's fifteen-year-old daughter Aura told President Cannon that she had dreamed three times that she had found a diamond ring, and in the third dream a man giving his name as Van Ness, and address Dallas, Texas, had told her he lost a ring while going through Provo 10 years ago, and that she could find it under a certain rock, giving minute details as to the location of the same. President Cannon listened to the story with interest, and at its conclusion told the girl she should follow up her dream. Aura got on her wheel and rode away. In less than two minutes she returned, holding a diamond ring in her hand. She claims to have found it in the place described by her dreamland visitant.

It is interesting to know that Miss Aura has a fondness for diamond rings and has answered a great many advertisements of them.—Salt Lake Herald.

Stole Watch to Get Square.

"Great Scott! but that's a fine watch," came from the chorus. "Where did you get it?" "Stole it," answered its possessor calmly. "You don't believe me, do you?" he went on. "Well, I'll tell you how it happened. I was on a Western disarct which enjoyed the reputation of being the toughest one covered by the house. I had some time to kill and so went into one of the gambling joints. It isn't necessary to go into details as to what happened. As luck would have it, there were a half dozen others in the place beside myself, who might be considered as possible victims. When the time came the lights were put out suddenly and then we had "rough house" for about ten minutes. In the middle of it I felt somebody grab my watch, and reached out after him. I caught some one's wrist and felt that he was just putting a watch in his trousers pocket. I gave his wrist a hard wrench and got the timepiece. Then I broke away. When I got to the light I found the watch was this one. As I never heard from the owner, I have kept it to compensate for the loss of mine." After which the waiter hurried over in response to six different signals.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Turkey Five Feet High.

John McCormick, a farmer who resides across the river from here in Illinois, is the owner of a turkey gobbler which towers in the air five feet and weighs 65 pounds. It looks more like an ostrich than a turkey. Its legs at the feet are an inch and a half in diameter, while close to the body they are the same size of an ordinary man's arm at the elbow. The bird's wings measure seven feet from tip to tip.—Clinton, Ill., Cor. Chicago Inter Ocean.
